

Jute table runner

Jute webbing is commonly used by gardeners for holding plants and trees upright without damage. Used in a more unusual way, it also makes a smart and very cost effective table runner.

A whole roll costs less than $10 and for this project you'll have enough left over to create a few smaller place mats too.

You will need:

Jute garden webbing
Hot glue gun or fabric glue
Sewing machine
Red cotton thread
Sharp scissors

Step 1

Cut 6 x lengths of jute webbing each measuring 1650mm and 30 x lengths each measuring 310mm

Step 2

Arrange the long strips side-by-side then weave a shorter strip across one end. Dab a small amount of glue behind each strip to secure

Step 3

Continue weaving the shorter strips, for these it's not necessary to glue behind each, just the two ends

Step 4

Continue all the way along and secure the other end by gluing behind each strip

Step 5

Trim the edges if necessary, then using a sewing machine and red cotton thread, sew a hem approximately 10mm all the way around

Tara Dennis

For more creative ideas go to taradennis.com